

The Arkansas Gazette's editorial policy on taxation and the public schools poses a problem for its readers.

If you're friendly, disposed to take the Gazette's policy at face value, it simply doesn't make sense; and if you're critical, you come up with something more sinister—the suspicion that the Gazette, instead of serving the public interest, is deliberately shadow-boxing with the school question in order to shield the vast property interests of Little Rock from ad valorem tax reform.

Under the title "Schools Could Become a Hot Political Issue," the Gazette published an editorial Sunday lamenting the fact that the legislature failed to provide additional state aid for the schools (the Gazette lost its fight to increase the sales tax from 2 to 3 per cent) and doubting that money can be found at the local district level. Here I quote the Gazette directly:

"For, no matter how you slice it, raising assessments means raising taxes—and that has never been an easy job as the long record of systematic default on local property taxes so well indicates."

"There are already reports that some rural districts—which are, of course, hardest hit by the curtailment in state aid—will have to ask for rates as high as 80 mills if they are to maintain their nine-month terms. Even though such a figure doesn't mean much when it is applied to 10 per cent assessments, there is nevertheless ample reason to doubt that local property owners are going to look upon it kindly."

What kind of language is this? Does the Gazette mean to tell us that, confronted by the school emergency, we are to be more solicitous of the feelings of the property-owning citizen than the Gazette was of the non-propertyowner when it gratuitously advised the legislature to raise the sales tax?

I would remind the Gazette that while it is crying over the refusal of the legislature to enact a new law we have had on the books for years a property assessment law which only needs public attention and enforcement in order to solve the basic school problem.

When the public school folks abandoned their dependence on local taxation to go chasing after illusory state aid they got into trouble—and they won't get out of trouble until they get back to doing the job they're supposed to do at the local level.

Here's what happened to state aid in the years following enactment of the 2 per cent sales tax in March, 1935:

First, the county judges reached in and diverted some of the state money levied for schools.

Then the city mayors got a piece of it.

And finally we learned the thing that shakes all belief in the judgment and impartiality of the Arkansas Gazette—we learned that on top of the school-fund-diversion started by county judges and mayors Big Little Rock herself reached into state aid to help support the public schools of Arkansas' largest and wealthiest city.

How can the Gazette presume to write words about the public school crisis when the actual import of every editorial is to defend the property interests of Little Rock against paying their just share of the education bill?

At another place in Sunday's editorial the Gazette said it "has for years insisted that assessment reform is basic to the whole tax structure in Arkansas"—but I challenge that statement.

The truth is, the Gazette has never given more than the merest lip-service to assessment reform. Its real thunder has been scrupulously reserved for every tax but the property tax.

Look at the record. The Gazette helped make assessment reform more difficult by advocating abolition of the 18-mill school deadline (Amendment No. 40 of 1948); and when this didn't work out, the Gazette again misled the public schools by advocating an increase in the sales tax in 1951.

I'm not being captiously critical. I am flatly stating the record—and it's diametrically opposed to the record Hope Star has written over the same period of years.

The Star advocated the 2 per cent sales tax in 1934 and 1935—the law was enacted in March of the latter year—and the Gazette never uttered an editorial word.

The Star tore up the local assessing record in 1934 and 1935, and publicly urged the fixing of values on rent property at 10 times the annual rental—extending the assessment percentage against that figure. This is basic to the whole assessment problem. As far as I know the Gazette never has remotely tackled this problem in its home city and county—yet that's where much of the vested wealth of Arkansas is.

The Star in 1951 opposed further increases in the state sales tax while the property assessment law is being flouted.

I've got just this to say to the school directors and teachers of Hempstead and Nevada counties, and wherever else The Star circulates: You have all the law you actual-

Miss Harris Honored at Washington, D. C.

It will be of interest of friends to know that Nina Lee Harris, a former student of Hope schools has been elected queen of the Anacostia High School in Washington, D. C. She is also president of the Leader's Club and vice president of the National Honor Society. She is graduating June 14th in class of some 250. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Harris whose home is on South Pine Street, Hope, and is in Washington D. C. where Mr. Harris is Secretary to Congressman Oren Harris.

By need to solve your financial problems. Get a lawyer and an appraiser and some clerical help—and bring in the money.

The non-property-owners are today paying 2 per cent sales tax, but property taxes have risen hardly at all from the pre-sales tax level. Justice demands that you assess and collect property taxes. Under the law you can go as high as 50 per cent of the market value.

And until you have exhausted local tax resources don't expect further aid from the state. The Arkansas Gazette is a big newspaper but the record shows it is a small prophet. I'm telling the teachers how to be sure of getting a square meal.

Plenty of People Think They Look "Tweedy," But to Many They Simply Look Seedy

By HAL BOYLE
New York, May 27.—All my life I have yearned to look tweedy.

You think that's easy? Try it. It isn't as simple as buying a tweed suit. I tried that. It didn't work at all. I didn't look tweedy. I just stood looking baggy. My pants were knee sprung — as if I spent the whole day doing standing broadjumps.

No, wearing a tweed suit is no way to look tweedy. That just makes you look like a man who wants to look tweedy — and that means you just look fake-tweedy.

To look real-tweedy you simply can't have on a tweed suit at all. Just what is a tweedy look, Well, you can't define it exactly. On the other hand you can't mistake it when you see it. Some fellows look tweedy in bathing trunks. It is just a kind of air of desperate casualness, I feel.

"Well, heaven knows you look about as casual as a laundry bag," Frances said. "ut you don't look tweedy, dear. Let's face it. You look more like somebody who ran for city alderman—and lost."

May Impeach Governor of Florida

Tallahassee, Fla., May 28 (AP). — The Florida house of representatives was asked today to impeach Gov. Fuller Warren on grounds that he willfully disregarded his duties and ignored "evidences of lawlessness" in this far-reaching vacation state.

Rep. George Okell of Miami, until recently one of Warren's stout political supporters, introduced the resolution calling for impeachment of the governor on 10 counts of alleged misdominance in office.

All of them involved complaints that have been made publicly about the governor — about his campaign expenditures, the conduct of his racing commission, his statements of three ousted sheriffs, and his attitude toward the Florida situation.

A two-thirds vote of the house would immediately suspend the governor from office and senate president Wallace E. Sturgis of Ocala would take over his duties. The state senate would then, within six months, conduct a trial of the governor.

No Florida governor ever has been removed by impeachment.

Red Resistance Staffens, Many Prisoners Taken

Tokyo, May 28 — (AP) — Communist resistance stiffened today as United Nations troops pushed deeper into Red Korea after the war's greatest bag of prisoners.

But Lt. Gen. James A. Fleet said the Chinese Communists had lost their nerve and refused to fight when they couldn't attack U. S. Second Division.

"He (the enemy) lost his nerve. He just quit and hauled off and added the U. N. ground command."

U. S. Eighth Army headquarters announced 5,000 Reds surrendered Sunday. Another 4,000 were taken last week.

Most of the 5,000 were taken in a great boxlike trap, 25 miles across and ten miles deep. The trap is the Hwachon region, with U. N. forces anchored on each side in North Korea.

U. N. forces drove into Hwachon across the 80th parallel already punctured at half a dozen of the parallel and 10 miles west of Hwachon. Americans moved on their western flank.

Reds put up stiffening resistance against advancing U. N. Monday. And fewer surrendered.

An Eighth Army spokesman attributed the mass surrenders to the "cumulative effect of the long and intense fire to which the enemy was subjected since the start of their last offensive; the rapid pursuit by U. N. forces which cut off large pockets of the enemy; and the Red's lack of food and ammunition."

Reds abandoned huge stores of ammunition in their flight. Air men reported the Red retreat to central Korea resembled a rout. The Far East Air force said.

escape routes and may have knocked the Reds out as a serious threat for at least three months, U. S. Eighth Army officers said.

The Allied advance was general across the 125-mile front, it punctured the 28th parallel boundary of Red Korea on almost every main highway.

Hwachon, seven miles inside Red Korea on the central front, and Inje, four miles above the border on the east-central front, were firmly in United Nations hands. Both are key towns on Red escape highways.

South Korean troops were back in Yangyang, eight miles north of Parallel 38 on the east coast. In the west tanks led a tank force almost to Yonchon, six miles across the border and 35 miles north of Seoul, their tanks rumbled through Yonpyong, 32 miles northeast of Seoul and a mile across the border.

South of the border a key escape route was sealed when Americans captured Hyon, a road junction on the east central front, southwest of Inje.

U. N. tanks and infantry pushed north Monday from all captured towns.

A U. S. Tenth Corps briefing officer said a tank and infantry force streamed north of Inje. He added:

"We are continuing to counter-attack and also chop up and eliminate bypassed elements."

U. S. Second Division officers reported two groups of Chinese were ambushed southeast of Inje Sunday. "We slaughtered them," the officers reported. Between 500 and 1,000 were in each group.

Southeast of Hwachon a Chinese division — between 8,000 and 10,000 men — was reported fighting desperately to escape before American troops sealed their last avenue to the north.

The U. S. Second, Seventh, Third, 24th and 25th Infantry Divisions, the First Cavalry and the first marines were in the advance. So were British, French, "Parks", Greek, Dutch, Canadian, New Zealand, Australian, South African and other U. N. units.

Clearing weather enabled air forces to run back to the attack Monday after two days of bad flying conditions.

OPS Relaxes Retail Price Controls

Washington, May 28 (AP)—The office of price stabilization (OPS) today relaxed retail and wholesale price controls of manufactured goods to allow for adjustments to conform to changes in manufacturers' selling prices.

Officials said the move, designed to relieve retailers and wholesalers from possible hardships under new manufacturing price regulations, will result in some price increases and some decreases — probably more decreases than increases.

Manufacturers have been ordered to set price ceilings at pre-Korean levels plus subsequent cost increases. They have until July 2 to comply.

The OPS said a wholesaler or retailer buying from a manufacturer who has increased his price under the new system may recompute his own ceiling price upward.

If the manufacturer has decreased his price, the wholesaler or retailer must recompute his ceiling price downward.

OPS said today's action will give relief to the seller who had not raised his price — when the January general price freeze went into effect — to reflect a higher price charged by his supplier.

The new order was not an "across-the-board lifting" of the general freeze at retail and wholesale levels, OPS said, but rather a temporary move until more detailed ceiling can be arranged. It does not apply to most food commodities since price adjustment already have been allowed on food prices. Price director Michael V. DiSalvo said yesterday that a recent rollback order is "bringing the price of beef back within the reach of people."

He scoffed at a cattlemen's charge that the whole price control program "is a hoax on the American people."

DiSalvo appeared with Joe G. Montague, general counsel of the Texas-Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association, on television (NBC). The price director said beef prices have to be controlled "if we are going to have price stabilization."

He added that beef prices have increased 50 per cent since January, 1950.

Montague cited figures which he said showed that the expense of raising cattle also had spiraled. OPS ordered a 10 per cent cut in cattle prices a week ago. Additional rollbacks of 4 1/2 per cent each are scheduled for Aug. 1 and Oct. 1.

Plenty Hot in Some Sections

By the Associated Press
The southwest still had above normal temperatures today but forecasters doubted a repetition of yesterday's heat which set records in five cities.

Record highs for May 27 were set in Tucson, Ariz., 107; El Paso, Tex., 103; Albuquerque, N. Mex., 98; Salt Lake City, Utah, 93, and Ely, Nev., 87. But the hottest temperature recorded yesterday was at Yuma, Arizona, where it was 114.

A "loop-the-loop" storm which doused the Midwest Sunday moved eastward toward the North Atlantic states. The storm, headed for Canada Saturday, suddenly doubled back and hit the northern plains and Great Lakes region with wind and rain.

Joseph Adonis, and his four lieutenants elected to plead no defense to four gambling conspiracy charges last Monday rather than face the publicity of a trial.

"Joe Adonis is the victim of the first written persecution that ever existed," his Attorney John Selser told the court.

"He pleaded guilty because he knows society has to have its bound of flesh," Selser added.

There had been rumors based on Adonis' plea last week that the state had made a deal with the racketeer in return for the plea. An 18-month sentence was hinted at by aides of State Attorney General Theodore D. Parsons.

Selser insisted that Adonis and Moretti never were principals in the operation of the three dice palaces, across the Hudson river from New York City. He said they merely loaned money to operators of the gambling places when they took heavy losses in 1940.

Selser said he may appeal the sentences and told Judge Leyden he now was sorry he had submitted no defense pleas for the defendants. He said he could have gotten his clients off with only a year in jail.

In his bitter court statements, Selser cited as a "damnable lie" statements by the senate crime investigating committee that Adonis was one of the seven bosses of the underworld. He said there never has been any proof that Adonis

Russia May Take Over Part of China

Taipei, Formosa, May 28 (AP)—A former high Chinese Nationalist official said today Russia is planning to incorporate nearly one-third of China into the Soviet Union.

Yolbars "Tiger" Khan, refugee Nationalist governor of Sinkiang, said five northwest provinces were involved. He said they are Sinkiang, Shensi, Kansu, Ninghsai and Tsinhsai.

The five provinces total about 1,300,000 square miles. That's more than 29 per cent of China's land mass, more than one-third the size of the United States. Sinkiang alone is more than twice as big as Texas.

Yolbars, bald and bearded Moslem who fled the Communist mainland May 1, said Russian troops were stationed in all five provinces. He said the Soviets planned to make the provinces a base for the eventual conquest of southeast Asia and India.

A military highway, he reported, was being built under Soviet direction between Tsinwa, capital of Sinkiang, and Lhasa, capital of Tibet.

Yolbars said 400,000 Chinese has been conscripted for military training.

"how tweedy can you get?" "Well, there I was — tweedy at last. Isn't it odd sometimes how life gives you an easy springboard to happiness just when the world seems to be closing in on you?"

Dozens of people come up to me now and say, "you're getting tweedier every day." And they never suspect it isn't really me. It's just the desperately casual way I have of smoking my new pipe. I keep it lit all the time.

"But you've got to take that pipe out of your face when you go to bed," Frances insists. "Nobody cares whether you look tweedy when you're asleep."

There are some penalties to pay for looking so tweedy. At night my mouth tastes like I had been chewing razor blades. And in the morning it tastes like the razor blades had rusted.

There was also the time I bumped into a door. A pipe-smoking friend of mine — tweedy looking fellow too — saw me standing there with my strangled look and only the bowl of the pipe sticking out of my mouth.

"Take a tip from me," he said. "You're smokin' ghat pipe too deep."

On, well. It's fun to be tweedy. Who cares about a few broken

Camden News Society Editor Killed in Wreck

By The Associated Press

The 32-year-old society editor of the Camden News was killed in an automobile accident last night, bringing Arkansas' weekend violent death toll to five.

Miss Elizabeth Ann Sifford, 32, suffered fatal chest injuries when the car in which she was riding struck a railroad overpass north of Camden on state road 7.

The driver of the car, Frank G. Bauksch of Chicago, an employee at the naval ammunition depot near here, was injured seriously.

Miss Sifford had been society editor of the News for two years.

Survivors include her mother, Mrs. Jack Sifford of Camden, and a sister, Miss Medora Sifford, a student at Randolph Macon college in Virginia.

Miss Sifford's death brought the state's weekly violent death toll to 10.

Cleo Brooks, 40, was stabbed to death in Little Rock Sunday. Police said he was killed in the same room where Calvin DeGraffenreid was stabbed fatally in March, 1928. DeGraffenreid's widow, Carrie, who served a prison term for her husband's death, was arrested for investigation in the slaying of Brooks.

Two-year-old Joyce Ann Marlow of Mountain Pine (Garland county) was killed Sunday when she was struck by her father's automobile. Officers were told the child ran into path of the car as her father, Valdon, was starting to drive away.

Alvin Browdon, Negro, about 19, drowned in Bearskin lake near Little Rock Sunday.

The fourth week-end death was that of a state hospital patient, who committed suicide last Saturday night.

Australia Mourns War Hero

Sydney, Australia, May 28—(AP)—A mourning Australia today headed a state funeral for Field Marshal Sir Thomas Blamey, first Australian to attain that top British military rank.

Blamey was the country's foremost military hero, commander-in-chief of Allied land forces under Gen. Douglas MacArthur in World War II. He died in Heidelberg military hospital, Melbourne, yesterday after almost a year of illness.

The funeral, with full military honors, will take place Wednesday afternoon.

Blamey became a brigadier in World War I at the age of 34 and served as chief of staff to Gen. Sir John Monash during the Allied victory push in 1918. He was knighted in 1935.

During World War II he was deputy commander in chief of Allied forces in the Middle East under Field Marshal Earl Wavell and later gained renown for his "mop-up" operations during the island hopping campaign that cleaned the Japanese from the southwest Pacific.

He received his marshal's baton last year in a wheel chair, just after becoming seriously ill with pneumonia.

Sees Faint Possibility of a Compromise in the Tense Situation Over Iran Oil

By DeWITT MACKENIE, AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The Anglo-Iranian oil dispute remains a dangerous threat to international peace though it still is possible to try guardedly that it is susceptible of compromise.

This controversy revolves about the Toheran government's sensational nationalization of the huge petroleum concern, over the protests of Britain which owns the majority of stock. Britain long has operated this oil field and is dependent on the oil to maintain her vital Middle Eastern position. American also is concerned and, to a lesser degree, so are other Western powers.

Naturally Britain is fearful that this Iranian oil may slip away from her, especially since the Iranians themselves are incapable of working the field. This raises the danger of neighboring Russia stepping in, since she long has had a yearning eye on this wealth of oil, as well as on a warm water port on the Persian gulf. The current position on the nationalization is this:

1. The Toheran government last Thursday fixed a seven-day deadline (in effect an ultimatum) for the petroleum concern to start conversations on ways and means of turning the company over to the Iranian government.

2. Yesterday Iran's aged premier, Mohammed Mossadegh, who frequently registers emotion with tears, declared that Iran will "fight to the end" to carry out the nationalization. And he wept as he said it.

3. Britain announced she was sending one tough 10th parachute brigade to the island of Cyprus, which lies in the Mediterranean within easy striking distance of Iran.

Secretary of State Acheson has appealed to Britain and Iran to sit down at a conference table and work out a peaceful settlement.

5. Thus far Iran has rejected all proposals for settlement by arbitration.

This brings us up to the question of what Britain is justified in doing to maintain her position. Would she, for example, be warranted in sending military forces into Iran to protect these great oil interests?

The British do not question the right of any government to nationalize commercial concerns. In fact it would be odd for the London Socialist regime to argue otherwise, since it is in process of nationalizing British industries.

However, London does maintain that under the contract the Persian government in effect agreed not to exercise any such nationalization rights.

A widespread feeling in Britain seems to be summed up accurately by Anthony Eden, deputy leader of the great Conservative party, who declared that the country has been "pushed around a little too much of late." He declared that international obligations are being flouted in Iran, and added:

"Giving away just international rights doesn't win peace. That is appeasement at its worst. It is bad for us and bad for other countries, and it is bad for peace."

Well, assuming that this is sound argument, what may we expect Britain to do? At this writing well informed sources lean to the belief that while Britain means business, she isn't likely to take military action unless the lives of British nationals or the oil properties are threatened.

That is to say, if the Iranian government is capable of maintaining order, Britain may be expected to hold her hand. However, there is danger of extremists—inspired by Red agents—getting control and precipitating a revolt. That might bring British troops into action.

This is a moment of watchful waiting, but it is justifiable to repeat that Britain appears to mean business. And it is a grave crisis.

Officers Seek Clues in Twin Slaying

Gulfport, Miss., May 28—(AP)—Law officers trained thread-like clues today trying to identify the pregnant woman and young boy found bludgeoned to death on a rocky strip of beach yesterday.

A footprint, signs of scuffling, some stained clothes and the victims' description were most of the leads the officers had to work.

The woman was found by a Pass Christian, Miss., fisherman, William Lake Sprinkle, lying face down in the surf clad only in brassiere and panties. Her skull was fractured and her forehead was slashed. About 100 yards away was the boy, about seven or eight years old. His head had been crushed "like an eggshell" from repeated blows with a blunt instrument, Sheriff Lax Quave said.

He said both victims were dark complexioned and apparently of Latin extraction.

An autopsy showed the woman, an attractive brunette between 25 and 30, had not been criminally assaulted, the sheriff said. She was in the fifth or sixth month of pregnancy, he added.

There were no signs of a struggle on the beach where the pair was found but a Pass Christian resident, Homer Bray, Jr., found a partially-burned bundle of clothing floating in a canal near his house. He told the deputy sheriffs he also had noted what appeared to be signs of a struggle on the canal—about three-quarters of a mile from where the bodies were found.

He was the second Confederate to die in Arkansas this year. The first was Sam B. Russell of Heber Springs, who died last March 9.

G. A. Richards, Radio Station Owner, Dies

Detroit, May 28—(AP)—George A. Richards, owner of radio stations WJR in Detroit, WGAR in Cleveland and KMPC in Los Angeles, died early today at the age of 62. He had been charged in federal communications commission hearings with ordering distortion of newscasts to fit his own political views.

Richards' death from a disease of the arteries came just two weeks after FCC attorneys had recommended that his license to operate the three stations be discontinued.

The attorneys' opinion followed lengthy FCC hearings in Los Angeles and Detroit, in which former employees of Richards-owned stations charged that he instructed them to put the Franklin D. Roosevelt family, Democrats and Jews in an unfavorable light in their news broadcasts.

Richards denied the charges, but never testified at the hearings. He was in Miami, Fla., while they were going on, and his physician informed the FCC that it would place too much strain on him.

On May 14 came the attorneys' recommendation to deny his application for renewed license.

The commission has not announced its decision in the matter. But Richards indicated earlier that if the recommendation went against him after the FCC hearings he would take the matter to court.

Runaway Ram Car Kills One Motorist

Los Angeles, May 28 (AP)—A wild dash of a runaway auto through the heart of the city district Sunday killed one motorist and injured 13.

The car rammed into a stalled auto parked on a city street. Mrs. Leona Moon, 36-year-old, was killed. The car was a 1928 Buick. The driver, a young sailor, was credited with preventing more casualties. Yordman Wadsworth Brown, 36, was killed when he was struck by the runaway car. He was driving a 1928 Buick. The car cut off in the Southern city yard.

He waved frantically from the stalled auto as the runaway car sped up to 80 miles an hour on a downgrade. A guardman, James L. Salinas, Los Angeles, drove alongside the runaway car, shouting at the driver to stop. He said crews switching out a freight train from the car cut off in the Southern city yard.

The five automobiles involved in the crash were parked on the rails at a section waiting for a switch to pass on another track.

It took firemen three hours to free many of the injured from the tangled wreckage. Many of the injured were taken to nearby Huntington hospital, taken dead from her crash.

Segregation Case Up to Three Judges

HOPE, Ark., May 28 (AP)—The legality of segregation in the South Carolina public schools will be decided by a panel of three federal judges here today. The case has far-reaching implications for the state as a whole. The attack on segregation itself is the secondary school case, a policy switch by the NAACP. In the past, the organization has been directly challenged. It is an assault on a provision of the South Carolina constitution of 1895 which requires separation of white and Negro children in the public school. The suit was filed by parents of Negro children against school authorities in Clarendon county, Hope, over the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which is directing strategy for the plaintiffs, asserts. "The real defendant is the segregated school system. It is the system which will go on trial. The officials are merely the instruments of a tradition and a policy. The attack on segregation itself is the secondary school case, a policy switch by the NAACP. In the past, the organization has hacked suits for "equalization" of school facilities. The NAACP claims the South Carolina segregation provision violates the 14th amendment of the U. S. constitution, which guarantees equal protection of the laws to all U. S. citizens. Gov. James F. Byrnes has gone on record as favoring the abolition of the public school system if segregation is banned.

Detroit Strike Goes to Court Showdown

Detroit, May 28 (AP)—his city's 38-day transit strike comes to a court showdown today, with drivers pledged to continue the bitter dispute until their demands are met. Show cause hearings on injunctions asked by the city and a taxpayer were scheduled at 2 p. m. EST by Circuit Judge Ira W. Jayne. The city's petition would prevent the union from interfering with any move to resume operations.

Judge Jayne has had the two petitions before him for nearly two weeks but has been trying for an out-of-court solution through closed door hearings with the involved parties.

The talks broke off last Friday, however, with no progress reported. Chief point at issue is the applicability of the state's Hutchinson act, forbidding strikes in public utilities. The act was invoked by the city, and all but a few of the 3,500 strikers were fired.

The taxpayer suit, brought by Attorney Irving L. Cohn, asks that operations be resumed by both parties pending a court test of the act. The pledge of the drivers, members of Division 20, Street Car and Bus Operations Union (AFL), came at a mass meeting Sunday. Approximately 1,000 workers attended. Past attendance at such rallies has been about 2,000.

Frank X. Martel, president of the Detroit and Wayne county Federation of Labor (AFL), first asked for a show of hands by any drivers willing to return to work. Not a hand was raised. Then Martel asked:

"How many of you want to stick this out until we win our demands?"

The crowd stood, shouted and stamped.

The union seeks an 8-1-2 cent an hour raise, from its present base of $1.67 1-2. The city offered five cents on the condition that

Says Russia Should Get Peace Appeals

United Nations, N. Y., May 28 (AP)—Warren R. Austin, U. S. delegate to the United Nations, thinks sponsors of communist-inspired peace appeals should address them to Moscow and Peiping—not to the United Nations.

Answering a bid from Frederic Joliot-Curie, French atom scientist and communist leader, to support appearance of a delegation from the communist-dominated world peace council before the I. N., Austin said:

"If your delegation honestly desires to make a contribution to peace, I suggest that it visit Moscow and urge the Soviet ruling circle to abide by the (U. N.) charter and the other international agreements to which it is pledged. Your delegation could then proceed to Peiping and urge the ruling circle there to end the aggression in Korea, withdraw its forces and let the Korean people organize the independent, unified and democratic nation the U. N. seeks for them."

Austin's letter was made public yesterday. It is estimated that 20 per cent of the nation's steel and 30 per cent of its pig iron are made in Pennsylvania, mostly in the industrialized western section of the state.

WESTINGHOUSE

ANOTHER NEW LAMP PLANT IN ARKANSAS

The Westinghouse Lamp Division of the Westinghouse Electric Corporation will build a new glass plant on the shore of Lake Catherine, southeast of Hot Springs. The plant will make light bulb blanks to be used in making finished bulbs at Little Rock, Arkansas, and other Westinghouse lamp plants.

Nearly all of the 500 employees of the 300,000 square foot, 30 acre glass plant will be residents of Hot Springs and the vicinity. Electricity will be supplied by the Arkansas Power and Light Company, and natural gas will be supplied by the Arkansas-Louisiana Gas Company, while other raw materials such as sand, limestone, and soda ash will come from nearby areas. A prime factor in choosing the location is the unparalleled growth and the increasing importance of the Southwest, plus the availability of the kind of people Westinghouse likes to have as co-workers.

Sales by the Westinghouse Lamp Division (which makes over 10,000 types and sizes of lamp bulbs for homes, commerce, and industry) have tripled in the last 10 years. When completed, the Hot Springs plant will be the eleventh Westinghouse Lamp Division plant.

Westinghouse is pleased to become part of the Hot Springs community. With the aid of the people of Arkansas, Westinghouse will continue to make products of outstanding quality.
